

Services

Web design and solutions

From a personal website to the deployment of a commercial or institutional activity, I offer a range of skills to help you develop your presence on the Internet.

These services are based on the notion of service: listening, then bringing together and orchestrating the elements specific to your activity, project or company.

If required, my services include an image study and expertise in corporate consultancy, quality and organisation.

Custom solutions

Would you like to have a management system that accurately reflects the practices, ways of doing things and needs of your business or company? An intuitive application with an inviting interface that's fun to use and, if necessary, shared across a network with your colleagues?

Examples

- activity management for freelancers
- collaborative spaces for any activity
- online training management
- purchasing systems
- virtual environments, etc.

Consulting & development

Benefit from an outside perspective and multi-disciplinary expertise when setting up or developing your projects and activities. My services will help you refine your intentions, identify your weaknesses and strengths, and then put in place the development, organisation and management tools best suited to your business.

Apple® advice and services

Based on more than 40 years' experience, my Apple® services include the study of specific solutions, advice on the purchase or renewal of equipment and, if required, the installation of equipment and training.
